Kaldslettstien

Just a stone's throw from Tromsø city centre is one of the region's best preserved cultural landscapes. Above Solligården on the mainland side, the path snakes through a lush cultural landscape with flower meadows, old buildings and large birches. The whole path was built by hand between 1925 and 1930 by Alf Larssen. Just beyond the powerline there is a rustic shelter and fire pit. If you ascend to the end you will reach Sollidalsaksla, offering a beautiful view of Tromsøya and Kvaløya. Have a good trip!

Trail description

A trip along Kaldslettstien is a journey back in time. The farm at Kaldslett was established in 1825. The land above the road was used for grazing, pasture, and forestry until 1925. It was then that Alf Larssen began to clear and cultivate new areas above while building new roads with the surplus stone from the cleared land. The stone was transported by horse-drawn sled to Tromsdalen. All stonewalls, the rails and the tunnel were built using only hand tools as aids without machines. Along the trail are old buildings reminding us of a bygone era. Ishavskysten Outdoor Association is managing the path on behalf of the landowner.
